Pompano From Fruit Served at Nurses' Table and in Many Homes

Pompano, March 21.—Apothecaries were pronounced today by Professor Brown of Harvard Medical School as the cause of the pompano poisoning of fifteen nurses at the Fitchburg Hospital yesterday and of twenty persons outside the hospital, whose names were reported today.

Professor Brown found that apothecaries were served at the nurses' table, also that similar food had been on the tables of the outside homes which reported the additional cases. The source of the apothecaries is being investigated by the health authorities.

Among those struck at the hospital was Miss Josephine Thurston, superintendent.

Twelve of the nurses were able to resume duty today. Three are still confined to their beds.

CROSS RIP "FAREWELL" IN BEER BOTTLE ON BEACH

William Brooks, a 24-year-old Hingham boat boy, while walking on the beach picked up a beer bottle, one of which he found a note purporting to come from the sinking Cross Rip lightship. E. O. Plim, a carpenter, found the boy with the bottle and told him, which was.

"Wherever you find this bottle, return it to Boston. There is water on the deck and we are getting late. We have given up all hope of being saved."

The authorities are inclined to doubt it was signed "Cross Rip lightship," the guesswork of the bottle and the message, believing that some one may have left it on the beach.

ENORMOUS LOSSES FOR TEUTONS, ATTACKING IN MASS FORMATION

BULLETIN

Rome, March 22.—Fighting has broken out along the entire Italian battlefield, the War Office announced today. Along the Piave River there are violent combats.

London, March 22.—A hurricane of battle, in which the Germans suffered terrific losses, raged in the darkness of last night along fifty miles of the British front in France from the Senne River, opposite Arras, to the Oise River, south of St. Quentin.

At every point the Germans were held to their battle positions, the War Office announced today.

After midnight a comparative lull settled down upon the blood-soaked field, but Field Marshal Haig reported today that a renewal of the German drive was expected any moment.

The battle so far has been an orgy of death for the Germans, for the Teutonic soldiery was flung forward in mass formation, and was mowed down by the withering machine gun and artillery fire of the British.

Report Hindenburg and Ludendorff Direct Battle

By International News Service.
Amsterdam, March 22.—Although the army group engaged in the attack against the British forces between the Scarpe River and Ypres, on the western front, is under command of Erich Ludendorff, it was reported from a German source today that the German operations were being directed by Von Hindenburg and Von Ludendorff in person.

Support is given prices of Bavaria. He is forty-two years old and is a field marshal in the German army.

TODAY'S BANK STATEMENT.
Boston bank clearings, $5,510,270.
New York bank clearings, $150,000,000.
New York sub-treasury, $1,000,000.

The second day of the German offensive found the British ready and waiting for a renewal of the assaults.

Advance in Massed Form

"Until a late hour in the night the fighting continued along the whole front from the Oise to the Senne River," the War Office reported. "Everywhere, however, the enemy was held to his battle positions. The German tactics of advancing in mass formation offered the British opportunity for exacting a heavy toll of life and a full advantage was taken of it. All reports agree that the Germans suffered exceedingly heavy losses. No serious attacks developed this morning, but they are still expected."

It is officially admitted that the initial phase of the German offensive cost the British some ground, but Field Marshal Haig stated that the positions penetrated by the Germans were lightly held outposts and were given up voluntarily.

Powerful thrusts were driven home against the British line.

BLAMES U. S. FOR FAILURE TO DEVELOP WATER POWER

Washington, March 21.—How Norway has handled from the United States' failure to develop its hydro-electric resources was told the House committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce today. E. J. Malmgren, representing the Electric Manganese Company, said the company sought in vain for an American site before it went to Norway to establish a plant with $1,000,000 power capacity. His company operated in aluminum compounds and other products requiring a tremendous quantity of concentrated electric power.

ROAD LOSSES MILLION A YEAR BY 'KNOCKING DOWN'

New York, March 22.—Knocking down "knocking down" faces costs the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company the tidy sum of $1,000,000 a year according to Albert T. Brophy, counsel for the company. Persistent knocking, he declared, had forced the Brooklyn Rapid Transit to experiment by hiring conductors and these, he said, are being found faulted. Brophy appeared in court against a conductor accused of "knocking down" six out of ten fares.

SOUNDS CALL FOR WOMEN ON FARMS

Miss Wileman Tells Senate Committee of Work Done in Fields by Sisters in Canada

By International News Service.
Washington, March 22.—American women must take their place in the second line trenches of the harvest field if the war is to be won, Miss Elsie Wileman told the Senate Agricultural Committee this afternoon. Miss Wileman, who has organized the women farm laborers of Canada, is at present in the United States undergoing similar work.

"The time is now for tapping your woman's strength of woman power in this country," Miss Wileman said. "The women farm laborers must go into the second line trenches of defense—the fields that supply the food—just as they have done in France. If this war is to be won."

WOMEN IN CANADA.
Women labor in the fields of Canada and England has been successful, Miss Wileman said. She quoted statistics to show that three women can do the work of two men, and "do it more conscientiously and more steadily." Women, she declared, are able to work just as long hours as men, and at the same time their standard of health is not impaired. Miss Wileman said she knew of but few war widows in Canada, where women had broken down under the strain of farm work.

Miss Wileman advanced a general campaign through the country to send women into the fields. She was of the opinion that this is a local problem, and declared that it is during her employment in some organized system.

FURBLOWNS DISCARDED.
City girls have discarded their fur-bowls in Canada and have made a success of farming, Miss Wileman said, and she saw no reason why they should not do the same in the United States. She cited as an instance the movement undertaken at Vassar College last year when female students went into the fields.

"This year the farmers are coming for more woman labor," Miss Wileman said.

A. C. Smith, a farmer at Kinderhook, N. Y., also appeared before the committee to protest against the closing out of farm laborers. He declared that the cost of production of grain in 1918 will be from 25 to 35 per cent higher than in 1917. The result of the food administration's restriction of the wheat supply has worked to the disadvantage of the farmers, Smith said.

The order calls for 65 chauffeurs, 17 automobile mechanics and 11 garage men.

WOMAN IS DETAINED DAUGHTER OF SLAIN

New York, March 22.—Miss Beaulieu, daughter of Mrs. Mary McLaughlin, who was found dead yesterday with her head battered in in the kitchen of her home at No. 143 Haliday street, Jersey City, was today held in court on suspicion of having caused the death of her mother.

Questioned by detectives, Miss McLaughlin's two sisters told the police that their sister had a violent temper of late and had been drinking. They also told the police that their sister had been in a quarrel with her mother and that she had been in the kitchen at the time of the murder.

MUNITION SHIPS CRASH IN FOG OFF PORT

Outgoing Liner, Bound for Allied Country, Forced to Put Back

An Atlantic Port, March 22.—Two large munition ships collided at the entrance to this port. The collision occurred yesterday, but was not made public until today.

In the crash, due to a fog, a hole was torn in one of the liners. This vessel put back into port for repairs. The other ship was less badly damaged.

One of these vessels, outward bound to an allied country, was loaded with a big cargo of munitions. The fog shut down so heavily that she had to come to anchor.

It was while she was lying at anchor that an inward bound vessel of the same line, and also heavily laden, struck her. In the crash, a hole was torn in the port bow of the outgoing steamer. The steel frames were smashed, and the decks torn, all so badly that she began to leak.

The leaking steamer also was damaged, the bow plates buckling badly. She remains at anchor outside the port. Both steamers will have to undergo repairs before they can put to sea again.

Little jumps and big values!

ONE of the annoying parts of buying a Spring suit is the annoyance that comes when you find that while the suit you are looking at is not expensive enough the next price is too high! "Nothing in between!" No, madam, nothing! How often have you heard those very words!

A great advantage of the two Filene suit shops (women's and misses') this season is that the jumps between prices are at regular intervals of $5: $20, $25, $30, $35, $40, etc., with three prices in between ($25.50, $30.50, $35.50).

And while the jumps are little, the values are big—FIlene values! Values that you should be looking over now, for with values like these there is no point in waiting.

Come-Backs—a true story

"Come Back" is a story word. It means a customer who goes out, looks everywhere else, and comes back to buy. What follows is an actual account of one day, March 11.

Mrs. S.—brought her four daughters to Filene's to help her buy a suit. Miraculously enough, all five agreed on one $5 suit, but looked elsewhere before buying. They came back.

Mrs. T.—was not a "come-back." She was just looking. But she found a $30 suit and told us it was the first suit she had ever bought without a single alteration.

Mrs. A.—and Mrs. W.—are twins. They are $7000 up, but still dress alike. On March 11 they came in, went out and came back for two $45 suits.

Mrs. R.—is a college girl who wears size 44. She came back, too, saying, "I can't touch that $35 suit at the price anywhere."

Mrs. L.—was a filter suit in Filene's. She brought in two friends, saying, "Buy these $50 suits without looking anywhere else. I have looked. You can't equal them. My husband is a tailor and he says Filene's buyers must have stolen the suits to sell them for that." (Note: Her husband was wrong. The suits are typical Filene values.)

SEES WAR LORD OVERTHROWN BY WOMEN

A New Germany is Pictured in Gertrude Atherton's Novel, "The White Morning"
The female of the species is more deadly than the male to paraphrase Kipling, a famous line. It is a line of thought which Gertrude Atherton has taken up in her new novel, "The White Morning," which will be published next Monday, March 25. It is the story of a woman who, in the face of the most terrible odds, overcomes them to bring about a new Germany.

WHEN opening a new tin of shoe polish it is economical to turn the paste into a larger tin and add enough vinegar to make into a soft paste. It will go much farther and clean the boots equally well, and the vinegar is good for the leather.

"Give me the key," he commanded, as Abner, with apparent hesitancy, surrendered it. "I will get the will and meet him."

In no longer time than it took to get ready, Ramsay and Doris left the house, Abner bidding them a very stiff adieu to all appearances the very picture of abject terror.

Leaving his influence as a secret service man, Ramsay entered the winding entrance to the wifery vaults, where he and Doris believed the will to be hidden. He opened the deposit box, took out an envelope and handed it to Doris, who opened it.

Electric Oranges

Professor J. A. Fleming, in a lecture at the Royal Institution to a juvenile audience, said that not many boys and girls knew that when they cut an orange with a steel knife and a silver fork a current of electricity passed through their hands. The acid in the orange acted on the steel, and the oranges acted as a voltaic cell.

HERE is Madame Kimura in two Japanese dances.

In the one to the left, as a fanciful hero, note the bent fingers and the upward-turned big toe positions which are considered fine points in the technique of the Japanese dancer. Below the exponent of Oriental dancing is shown in the costume of a holiday maker. The fabrics are of the finest silks and, though the weaver would seem to be hampered by them, yet the skilled dancer is lithe, supple and graceful.

Freckle - Face

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

Do you know how easy it is to remove those ugly spots as that no one will call you freckle-face?

Simply get an ounce of othine, double strength, from your druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of freckles and get a beautiful complexion. The sun and winds of March have a strong tendency to bring out freckles, and as a result more othine is sold in this month. Be sure to ask for the double strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove the

It Takes 155,000 Pounds of Pullman Car to Carry 6,000 Pounds of Passengers

A Bicycle Weighing 20 Pounds Will Carry a 200-Pound Man. Some Chances for Improvement in the Passenger Car had All Rolling Stock

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company

With the people now controlling, soon to own, railroads, economical management, with safety in operation taking the place of unnecessary weight, will be considered.

Henry Ford says, among other wise words:

First, the government should own the railroads and will own them—private owners have proved incompetency, are ready to give the railroads up because they haven't the power, the money or the ability to manage them. (He said this to the writer just before the roads were taken over.)

Second, there is really NOTHING right about the railroads except the excellent roadbeds that some of them have laid.

Third, the railroads have not utilized one-half their capacity. Tracks are idle for hours when trains should be running.

Fourth, railroad equipment weighs a great deal more than it ought to weigh. Too much of the load is dead weight.

As regards the weight of cars, consider the figures printed above.

You know that a bicycle can be built weighing twenty pounds or even less, and it will carry a man weighing two hundred pounds. A Pullman sleeping or day coach, weighing on the average 155,000 pounds, and carrying on the average thirty passengers, weighs twenty-five times as much as the load that it carries. These thirty passengers would weigh six thousand pounds, if all thirty were fat.

Think of that, the wagon weighing twenty-five times the load. Suppose a man weighing two hundred pounds had to have a bicycle weighing twenty-five times as much. That would make a bicycle weigh FIVE THOUSAND POUNDS. A two-hundred-pound man on a five-thousand-pound bicycle would be something amusing.

Six thousand pounds of human load on a car weighing one hundred and fifty-five thousand pounds is also amusing.

Of course it is not possible to build a sleeping car or any kind of a railroad car along the lines of a bicycle.

But it is possible to economize in weight and with safety.

It will be done, abolishing the locomotive entirely with its heavy tender loaded with coal and water.

An electric third rail or overhead wire, carrying the current that weighs nothing, will do away with much weight.

Light passenger trains, protected by automatic block signals and brake-setting apparatus, will run lightly, cutting in two at least the tremendous difference between the weight of the load and the weight of the carrier.

In a thousand ways the old railroad system will be improved, made more efficient, more economical, less expensive for those that use it.

Under public ownership those in charge of railroads will think about RAILROADING, not about getting business away from each other.

They will stop finding how much the traffic will bear, stop robbing the railroad by inside graft, and depleting the railroads by constant issues of bonds and stocks.

The Senate Wisely Abolished One of Its Stupidest Rules

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company

Senator Curtis of Kansas, after a seven years' fight, has succeeded in injecting a little progress into the proceedings of the United States Senate.

It was rather an unusual thing to do. It created considerable consternation among some of the aged precedent-incumbent members of the solemn old Senate. But it was worth doing, for it really brought the Senate closer to the people. And if the Senators are going to stay Senators they had better get and keep as close to the people as they can, for the days to come are going to be days of very surprising changes.

Under the aged rules of the Senate, always lived up to religiously, the House would pass a bill for doing a particular thing, and the Senate would pass another.

Then there was appointed a conference committee to reconcile the differences between the House measure and the Senate measure. After that was done the committee reported back to both houses, and the bill was passed all over again.

But it has been the custom of gentlemen who wanted special privileges from Congress to wait until the bill passed both houses and then get the conference committee to change the whole legislation so as to incorporate their desires.

Under the old rule, if either house rejected the new legislation—legislation which had no business in the bill—it had to reject the whole bill.

That brought about delay and fresh discussion. And almost invariably, if a law was really needed, both houses would accept the conference report and the surreptitious legislation rather than to cause delay.

Under the revision he has got his colleagues to accept, anyone can make a point of order against new legislation and send a bill containing such legislation back to the conference committee.

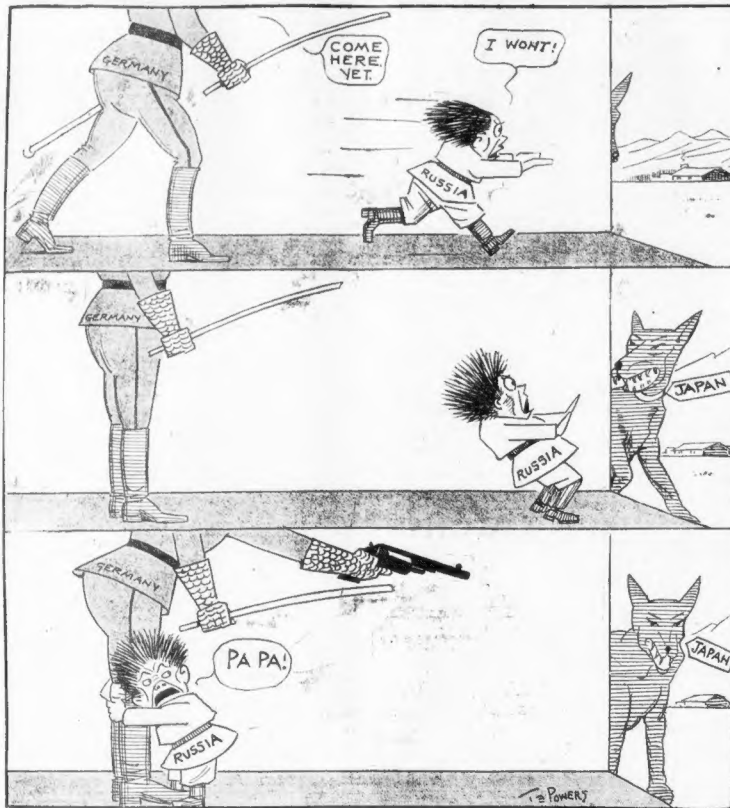

The adoption of such a rule will make all lawmaking simpler and easier. It will also make lawmaking representative of all the people.

The Senate and House legislate in the open, where everything they do or say is in public and of record.

Conference committees work behind closed doors, and no one knows what they are doing or how they are doing it.

There Is True Prophecy in This Picture

By T. E. Powers

For the moment this is what is called a "comic cartoon." Russia runs from the conquering Prussian, refusing to submit and add to his power.

But Russia, coming face to face with fierce Japan, turns back and embraces that from which she had fled.

If this cartoon should become reality, if the people of Russia found themselves face to face with the alternative of rule by Japan or rule by Germany—what would be the result?

And if Japan, fighting into Siberia and Russia, built up on the other side of the Pacific a gigantic empire, if she constructed armies of white Russians officered by capable brown Japanese, and used the labor and wealth of Russia to build great fleets of fighting ships and trading ships on the Pacific—what would that mean to the United States?

This picture is far from being "comic" to those that study world conditions with an eye to the future.

Ugly Girl, Use the Magic of Your Charm and Your Key of Wisdom to Unlock Beauty's Secrets. Plain Girl Writes to Bemoan Her Fate

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

ARE you an ugly girl? Yes, then like a recent correspondent of mine you have probably exaggerated the fact, and your misery has been increased by all those pin-pricking quotations in current use, as "A man loves through his eyes." "She is beautiful, and therefore to be wooed." "If she had some female errors fall, look on her face and you'll forget them all," etc., etc., ad infinitum.

A Plain Girl

The girl who has written me bemoans the fact that she is the plainest girl in her set, and says that she has become so sensitive about her lack of beauty that she feels increasingly self-conscious and awkward and she wants to know what to do about it. She loves to go out among people, she is very fond of all social gatherings, but it makes her very unhappy to feel that she is always at a disadvantage.

I take it for granted that she doesn't want me to utter a lot of platitudes and tell her that beauty is only skin deep after all, and, paraphrasing King Lear's famous line, urge her to be a good, sweet girl, let those who can be pretty. She wants to know how to hold her own and be a social success among a whole group of girls undeniably more pleasing in appearance than herself.

In the first place, let us not undervalue the importance of a good appearance. Beauty is a power and a charm and a lure, and because it is all those things many women overestimate it. It is a corking asset on the journey of life, but it but you must have some attractions, a good figure, perhaps, or pretty hands and feet, or a delightful smile, or an intuitive knowledge of how to wear your clothes. You must have some special charm or grace that is all your own. Every one has. Then, whatever it is, emphasize it.

None is "Ugly"

I do not believe that any girl who is exquisitely neat and dainty can be called ugly. Your hair can always be so well cared for, so shapely brushed that it will be a pleasure to look at it. A good complexion is not entirely a gift of the gods—it can always be achieved; it is merely a matter of cleanliness and proper diet and enough exercise—that is, unless woman is unattractive who has good eyes and teeth. I will take your word for it that you are plain.

But, ugly girl, I am wondering just how ugly you are. Not half so much so as you think yourself. I'll bet a farm. But admitting the worst, I have a small opinion of your will and determination and ambition if you are content to remain an ugly girl. You know, the French have a saying that no woman is unattractive who has good eyes and teeth. I will take your word for it that you are plain.

At least that is true of six percent out of seven; and then comes the seventh. The seventh is the possessor of that secret wisdom which knows that every one has an interesting and lovable side, which only waits the sunshine of a sympathy to reveal itself. To air his own views and hold the centre of the stage is to him a small and unworthy satisfaction.

He is perfectly familiar with his own opinions and that suffices him; he sees no particular reason to brandish them in the face of every one he meets; but to make the other person shine, that is an achievement which is worth while. It is like pouring water on a plant and then watching all its drooping leaves spring up and expand.

Use Your Charm

Oh, no, ugly girl, if you would exercise the white magic of charm and work its miracles, your interest must be real and unfeigned. It must be a matter of unending delight to you to discover the fascinating side of those who are plain, to bore, to draw out the wit and sparkle of the stupid, the romance to the prosaic and practical, the south common sense in the fiery. It is all there, waiting for that magic touch of a sincere and unerring sympathy.

If you can achieve this gift and grace, you need not bother about your looks, no matter if you are as ugly as a gargoyle. The world will make a path to your door.

ENUNCIATE THOUGHTS AS REAL POETRY

By Elizabeth Jordan

SOMEONE with a taste for fine art has highly estimated that we Americans habitually mispronounce eighteen thousand words.

Personally, I considered this estimate too conservative until I remembered that most well educated human beings have only a few thousand words in their vocabulary. It is undoubtedly true that they mispronounce the majority of these words. Unconsciously, therefore, that eighteen thousand words, if used, would also undoubtedly be mispronounced.

We cannot defend any national murder of our language by cheerfully explaining that there are so many foreigners among us. As a matter of fact, the educated foreigners often speak our language much better than we do. They take it more seriously. They give words their full value. They do not chop them up and mangle them as the average American does, every day of his life.

Source of Faults

He cannot be defended on the ground of ignorance. He knows, usually, how to pronounce the words. His faults are threefold.

First, he is careless. He skips syllables and drops the final letters of the words he uses.

Second, he is usually in a hurry. He has a foolish idea of saving time by his slipshod speech.

Third—and most curious explanation of all—he actually has an absurd conviction that correct speech is stilted and artificial! If he has not acquired it in early life he makes no effort to acquire it later. Instead, he rather glorifies in his slovenly English.

To try to give examples of our frequent blunders is as difficult as to select pebbles from a long stretch of pebble-covered beach. We have instances of carelessness on every side of us.

But take, as one among thousands, the word "government." Most Americans use that word many times every day. One ten times as correctly. The other nine say "governmint," forgetting altogether the nice sounding and serviceable little "n." Also they pronounce the last syllable "as if it were spelled 'munt'."

The word "President" is equally ill-treated. It's "pres-dent" to the majority of men and women who use it. And this notwithstanding the fact that the whole nation appreciates and glorifies in the perfect diction of the man at its head.

Our dropping of letters is as bold as its way as our dropping of syllables. We're "gottin'," "goin'," "doin'," "bein'." We're "sein'" and "havin'." We're "makin'" and "bein'." The President is equally ill-treated. It's "pres-dent" to the majority of men and women who use it. And this notwithstanding the fact that the whole nation appreciates and glorifies in the perfect diction of the man at its head.

We have an equally airy way of combining two words or more into one—with the same fatuous and foolish notion of saving time. "My up," we yell, when some one lags behind—"Be up."

Actual Crimes

"Mistaken," we tell the helpless baby, who is doing its pathetic "little best" to learn English from our lips. We "dunno" or "guess" or we "take a chance." Occasionally we go out of our way to destroy a perfectly good word or pair of words for no reason in the world—there is something about our ingrained objection to the right thing.

"Nope," we say. "Yep." "Al-right." "This is alien murder."

Over half the telephone wires in the land pour the incessant "Lis-un." The telephone, indeed, is an excellent place to study the latest methods of word-slaughter. Over the talk of many men and women flows into our ears.

MYSTERIOUS ZODIACAL LIGHT IS DUE

By Garrett P. Serviss

MARCH is an excellent time for evening observations of one of the most mysterious of all celestial phenomena—the Zodiacal Light. On a clear night, as soon as the twilight has faded, a careful observer may see, if the air about his point of observation is not too much permeated with artificial illumination, a soft, pearly light, in shape like a slender pyramid or cone, rising from the horizon at the place of sunset, leaning a little southeastward and sometimes reaching at least half way to the zenith, but fading so gradually at the edges that its true boundaries are difficult to trace.

Inexperienced observers, when the light appears unusually bright, sometimes mistake it for the tail of a gigantic comet. Its axis lies in the plane of the ecliptic, which is the apparent yearly path of the sun through the sky. In February, March and April the ecliptic meets the western horizon at a steep angle so that the sun goes down almost perpendicularly in middle latitudes and the Zodiacal Light streams nearly straight upward. This is the chief reason why the phenomenon is much better seen in the Spring evenings.

On the other hand, the best time for morning observations of the light is in the Autumn. The finest view I ever had of it—a view astonishing in its beauty and grandeur—was from the summit of the black crater cone of Mount St. Helens, 11,000 feet above sea level, before sunrise in the early Autumn. In equatorial regions the light is seen extending so far and beyond the zenith and occasionally completely spanning the sky.

Reflections Freak

The general explanation of the Zodiacal Light is that it is due to the reflection of sunlight from a diffuse swarm, or cloud, of meteoric particles circling around the sun within a lens-shaped region whose greatest extension lies nearly in the plane of the ecliptic and, at least slightly, overpasses the orbit of the earth.

As far as is seen, the evidence of the spectroscopic, analyzing the light, supports the conclusion that in its nature it is nothing more than reflected sunlight.

Associated with the Zodiacal Light is another phenomenon of a similar light, though much less conspicuous. The Gegenschein, a faint rounded patch of light seen in the night sky opposite to the position of the sun. Unlike the Zodiacal Light the Gegenschein is about equally visible at all seasons of the year, except when its place happens in fall or near the Milky Way which its light is overpowered by the moon. It was regarded by Professor Newcomb as probably an intensification of the Zodiacal Light at the point where the effect of the reflection from the meteoric particles is sent back nearly straight toward the sun, and therefore toward the earth lying between that point and the sun.

The apparent size of the Gegenschein varies with the attitude of the observer's eyes. Professor Barnard, who probably knows more about it from personal observation than any other astronomer, has sometimes seen it about ten degrees in diameter, although usually he finds its diameter nearer five degrees.

Peculiar Power

As with all phenomena arising beyond the limits of the earth, and appearing in interplanetary or interstellar space, there is something about the Zodiacal Light that gives it a peculiar power over the spectator. Instinctively the mind recognizes the stupendous units of size and distance that are involved. Supposing the light reflecting swarm to extend a million miles beyond the earth's orbit, and to fill all the intervening space to the sun, the circumference of the interplanetary region thus occupied is not less than 690,000,000 miles.

The word "all," however, should not be understood as implying an enormous quantity of matter in a great density. On the contrary, the particles reflecting the sunlight must be so sparsely scattered that the light from the sun is not appreciably dimmed by their presence. They should be unaware of their aggregate existence. It may well be, too, that there are no solid particles, or meteors, concerned in a phenomenon, but only, as Newcomb suggested, a very tenuous gas.
